

Joe O'Neill

Joe has been working in arts and education since 2007, and has organised and delivered projects throughout the UK. These include new arts festivals and individual shows, with a particular emphasis on improving access for young people in local communities.

He has developed programmes for Higher Education that seek to improve access for communities and individuals with protected characteristics. In 2015, he joined the Education Department at Shakespeare's Globe as Operations Manager.

In this role, he helps the Education team to programme, facilitate and deliver their various projects. These range from Shakespeare productions specifically designed for young pupils, to literary festivals for whole families.
